The conference format will bring all attendees together to listen to panel speakers at the morning session. The afternoon format will divide the group into breakout sessions to discuss research innovations, best practices, and personal examples of tribal and agency interaction. The focus will be “how do we all do a better job of interacting?” This portion will be facilitated and notes will be taken. The notes will be analyzed and consolidated into a TRB Circular that will be mailed to all participants and available for national researchers.

The conference will address public involvement, planning, and interaction among tribal, local, state, and federal government agencies.
