

The University of New Mexico

ATR Institute
801 University Boulevard SE, Suite 302
Albuquerque, NM 87106-4342
(505) 246-6410, Fax: (505) 246-6001
November 23, 2004

Tribal Experience of ATR Institute University of New Mexico

The work experience that ATR Institute, University of New Mexico, has with Pueblos and Tribes includes the following:

- ☐ “A Case Study in Regional Transit Consensus Building Between Local and Tribal Governments in New Mexico” paper, based on the creation in 2004 of the North Central Regional Transit District, for the 2005 meeting of the Transportation Research Board (TRB) of the National Academy of Sciences;
- ☐ Tribal Environmental Justice Listening Session, sponsored by the New Mexico Environment Department, held at Pueblo of Acoma, Sky City Hotel, and Executive Summary of the Listening Session (2004);
- ☐ A Case Study Approach to Creating Improved Tribal/State Relations: The 2003 Four Corners Institute (Two-Day Meeting and 2004 TRB paper by same name);
- ☐ The Four Corners Institute of 2002: Building on a Common Desire to Improve Tribal/State Relations (Two-Day Meeting and 2003 TRB paper by same name);
- ☐ Conference on Transportation Improvements: Experiences among Tribal, Local, State and Federal Governments (Two-Day Meeting and 2001 TRB Circular by same name);
- ☐ 2001 Tribal Radioactive Materials (RAM) Transportation Workshop (to develop government-to-government consultation framework between Sovereign Tribes and the US Department of Energy National Transportation Program to ship RAM through tribal lands across the country);
- ☐ “The Proposed Paseo del Norte Limited Access Highway through the Petroglyph National Monument: Gully Erosion Rates, Impact of Dirt Roads, Proposed Watershed Sensitive Guidelines and Native American Viewpoint on the Road” (paper, 2000);
- ☐ New Mexico Tribal/State Transportation Summit (Two-Day Meeting and Final Summary of Proceedings, 1999); and
- ☐ New Mexico Tribal/State Transportation Pre-Summit (Two-Day Meeting and Development of Summit Format and Issues for Discussion, 1999).