

THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS, THE NEW CONGRESS, AND IRAQ: A PANEL DISCUSSION

Friday, January 26, 2007
Noon-1:30 pm
Student Union Building
Ballroom C

Did the November 2006 midterm elections represent a political realignment? What are the consequences of a return to divided government in Washington? Is the United States changing course in Iraq? Should it? How might the 2008 presidential elections shape up?

Join us for a broad-ranging, incisive discussion of these and other questions about the implications of the November 2006 elections, the shift in control of Congress, and the debate on the way ahead in Iraq.

Speakers:

Lonna R. Atkeson, Professor of Political Science

Michael S. Rocca, Assistant Professor of Political Science

Andrew L. Ross, Professor of Political Science & Director, Office for Policy, Security & Technology

Christine M. Sierra, Professor of Political Science

Moderator: Mark Peceny, Professor, and Chair, Department of Political Science; Interim Director, Institute for Public Policy

Sponsored by:

Department of Political Science

Political Science Graduate Student Association

OPST Office for Policy, Security, and Technology

IPP Institute for Public Policy

For additional information contact Andrew L. Ross, Professor of Political Science and Director, Office for Policy, Security, and Technology at aross@unm.edu or 277-7391, or Ms. Stephanie Grant, OPST Program Administrator, at slgrant@unm.edu or 277-1391.